About the Course

This is a foundational module in mental health targeted for social workers after their first year of practice. It covers basic knowledge in common mental health problems to facilitate social workers to screen clients for management and escalation to the next level of care. The module also imparts social workers with the knowledge and skills to conduct a screening of client's basic mental state and case formulation using the Integrated Illness Causation Model.

At the end of the course, participants will be able to:

1. Screen clients for common mental health conditions for holistic social work case and care planning.
2. Screen client's mental state.
3. Apply the Integrated Illness Causation Model in social work assessment to facilitate case planning for persons with mental health problems.
4. Take appropriate actions to escalate cases with complex mental health issues and right-site clients to appropriate specialist mental health services.
