

Short Course: 2 Days

Process and Punishment

Upskilling social workers in different stages of their careers and helping them stay relevant in the complex social landscape to better serve their clients.

About the Course

The course will introduce participants to the sociological and psychological issues relating to incarceration and their impact on the processes of prisonization, prisoner identity construction and management, and subsequent reintegration into society. These issues will be examined against the backdrop of the philosophy and principles of punishment as well as the prison system. Particular emphasis will be devoted to assessing prison's social climate and its impact, real and/or perceived, on the post-release potentialities.

Participants will also be introduced to the phenomenology of the incarceration experience from the point of view of the incarcerated, and to consider and contextualize the contradictory demands of the processes of institutionalization, reinstitutionalisation, de-institutionalization and re-entry against the backdrop of the models of prisonization.
