

GRADUATE STUDIES

@ FACULTY OF ARTS AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

National University of Singapore

The Master of Social Work programme enables me to think and reflect more critically about social work as I grow as a practitioner. Through invigorating discussions with the lecturers, most of them senior practitioners in the field, are immediately applicable to ground practices. The diversity of experiences ranging from senior directors to newly-minted social workers across sectors within the programme provides a profoundly enriching and rewarding learning experience both in and out of the classroom.

With opportunities available to conduct practice research with the guidance of deeply experienced academics to generate important social work knowledge for local practice, I feel that my confidence is multiplied while working alongside my clients and fellow colleagues to effect positive change.

Kim Su Min

PhD student
English Language and Literature

It is an immense privilege for an international student not to worry about one's tuition fees and living expenses. I can only thank the countless sacrifices made to make my stay at NUS possible. FASS has created the environment and provided me with the resources to pave my academic path. Trying to incorporate the history and the cultural reception of mathematics into literary studies is not easy, but I am receiving invaluable support from the professors and fellow students in my department. They have always been willing to share their knowledge and perspectives to enlarge mine.
